On Cosmetic Procedures

Reshaping Arizona With Liposculpture

By: Dr. Corwin Martin

Liposuction has become the most common cosmetic procedure performed with over 400,000 operations done annually. It is designed for the permanent removal of fatty tissue from specific parts of the body. The most common areas of treatment are the abdomen (the "tummy"), buttocks ("behind"), hips ("love handles"), thighs ("saddle bags"), knees, chin, upper arms, and back. Liposuction is always an elective procedure that allows the cosmetic surgeon to remove undesirable, subcutaneous fat in isolated areas that have not responded to diet and exercise.

At Estetica Cosmetic and Reconstructive Surgery of Scottsdale, I perform tumescent liposculpture, which allows me to remove larger volumes of fat than older liposuction procedures. This outpatient procedure is done by making small incisions to inject a solution containing a local anesthetic and epinephrine into the desired areas. This solution causes the fatty tissues to swell, or "tumesce." It also numbs the area being treated and temporarily shrinks the blood vessels which minimizes blood loss and reduces bruising and swelling.

Since body fat is lighter than water, patients should expect to see volume loss (inches) rather than weight loss (pounds). Liposuction is not a procedure that is intended to be used for weight loss but is a volume-reduction of body fat. Our goal is to give our patients a renewed sense of self-confidence and a new body image.
